MACK ALFORD CORRECTIONAL CENTER

WARDEN: David Louthan

Mack Alford Correctional Center (MACC) is a multi-functional, state operated, correctional facility located near Stringtown. This facility houses more than 500 male inmates in a medium-security, long-term unit. MACC also has a minimum-security unit with approximately 260 male inmates.

MACC was established in the 1930s as a sub-prison of Oklahoma State Penitentiary (OSP). It provided separation for first-time convicts from OSP inmates, and provided work on the farm. During World War II, the facility, became a camp for foreign prisoners of war.

Following the war, it became the Stringtown Boys School. Oklahoma Correctional Industry (OCI) factories, located on facility grounds, teaches inmates to renovate furniture, produce metal signs, and sew garmets. Inmates working for MACC AgriServices division help run a 150 herd cow/calf operation.

Education

Many inmates lack education, a key component in avoiding re-incarceration. MACC offers literacy courses as well as diplomas for Pre-High School Equivalency and High School Equivalency.

Substance Abuse Treatment

For those inmates who need substance abuse treatment, MACC teaches them ways to avoid drug and alcohol use, while also helping them develop the cognitive, social, emotional, and coping skills needed.

Criminal Thinking

MACC offers Thinking for a Change, Anger Management, Victim Impact, Parenting and Life Skills programs to address thinking, judgment errors, and relationships linked with criminal thinking and behavior.
